A brief update on our 2004 South Africa special's partner charity

When Dazed devoted a special issue to South Africa six years ago, we supported African Solutions to African Problems (ASAP), a charity aimed at helping community-based projects of women in rural areas caring for orphans and vulnerable children affected by HIV/Aids. South Africa has the highest number of people infected with HIV in the world, with an estimated 5.2 million people living with the disease in 2008. That same year, it was estimated that 220,000 children under the age of 15 were living with HIV/Aids.

In 2004, Dazed visited the Kakaretso project in QwaQwa, one of the poorest areas of South Africa, which was started by a local nurse in 1997. These days, a network of 325 women work there with more than 4,200 children across 70 different centres, receiving training, grant assistance and access to resources with the help of ASAP.
